ONE DEAD FROM AUTO ACCIDENT

Henry Sheldon, purser of the inter-island steamer Kilaua, which returned this morning from Kau and Kona ports, is in the Queen's Hospital as the result of a broken leg and several bruises on the face, caused by a fall from an automobile, driven by Chauffeur Monish, a Portuguese, on Hawaii.

Monish, according to the report which reached here this morning, had his back broken and died almost instantly at the time of the accident. The rest of the passengers in the machine escaped injury.

Last Sunday Sheldon and his friends, including Engineer Garden of Honolulu — visited friends in Waioli, Kau. While going up an incline, the machine, in charge of Chauffeur Monish, turned over and threw its occupants to the ground. Monish, according to the report, fell under the machine, which broke his back, and he died almost instantly. Sheldon was pinned under the front wheel. His leg was broken and his face bruised.

As soon as the Kilaua docked this morning Sheldon was conveyed to the Queen's Hospital for treatment.

Akashoshi, Japanese druggist, was arrested last night by Chief of Detectives Melville for practicing medicine without a license. His trial will come up in Police Court next Friday morning.
